You'll Have to Hurry Up

Good things like this Big Ben Bargain Sale don't last very long.

Many of the items offered are goods so much wanted now and at such extremely low prices that they will not last much longer.

This sale CLOSES NEXT TUESDAY, August 19th. If you have not taken advantage of the low prices you will have to hurry.

Did you ever have an opportunity to get more real value for your money than this sale offers? The answer is "no."

Of course every person who has attended this sale recognizes the fact in very short time that this is something more than an ordinary sale—that the prices are considerably lower than at ordinary sale prices. They realize that this is a Rare Money Saving Opportunity, where the value of a dollar is stretched to the limit in order to move the goods quick.

Don't stay out and doubt—come in and find out.

Dr. H. J. Jackson, Dentist, who has had 20 years experience and is a graduate of the Royal College of Dental Surgeons, Toronto, also Toronto University, has opened his office in Dr. Lackner's old office, and will be prepared to give first class service in all branches of Dentistry. The office will be opened daily from 9 o'clock to 5 p.m.

The Presbyterian Sunday School picnic which was to have been held at Westcott last week was postponed on account of rain. All preparations had been made to hold the picnic on Monday of this week but again the rain started just in time to cause a great deal of disappointment to the youngsters and it had to be postponed again.

In a report of the shooting match of the Harmattan Rifle Association in our issue of July 30th R. McNaughton was credited with only 281 points which should have been 301 with a handicap of 20 points. It is also stated that all competitors shot with same rifles. Robert bids fair to come up to his fathers eigh standing in shooting. Alec McNaughton intends going to the D. R. A. meet to be held in Ottawa in the near future.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Eric Lindquist will be sorry to learn that they are leaving Didsbury on Thursday to take up their home near Munson. Mr. Lindquist, who has conducted the harness business in town for some time, has made a great many friends through his straight business dealings and his willingness to help out any undertaking for the good of the town and district and consequently will carry with him best wishes for a prosperous future.

Excellent School Work

GRADES IX AND X REPORT

The Didsbury School teaching staff for last term and the School Trustees have great cause for congratulation in respect to the recent departmental examinations for the higher grades in the Didsbury public and high schools. The percentage of pupils passing being very high which shows extremely good work for Principal Reed, and his conferees.

In grade VIII out of eleven pupils trying the examinations there were three failures. In grade IX out of thirteen candidates there was only one failure and in grades X and XI each had one failure.

Those passing the grade IX exams. are:—Ruby Weber, Jenny Findlay, Merl Eubank, Ethel Burgess, Lena Mekkleborg, Lorenza Mjolsness, Emily Moyle, John Bates, John Robertson, Ralph Wilson, Goldie Liesemer, George Sexsmith.

Those passing the grade X exams. are:—Lulu Shantz, Marcilla Moon.

Farm Help

Arrangements have been made this year for the sending out of harvest help on the Special cheap rate to the various points in Alberta from the City of Calgary instead of direct from Winnipeg. R. J. Daley, Publicity Commissioner for Alberta at Winnipeg, has given authority for the issuing of the rate to the Central Office of the United Farmers of Alberta through their Secretary, P. P. Woodbridge. The fact that the limit was only made known at the very last moment and is only for the period between the 1st and 15th of August, makes it almost impossible for each of the various branches of the U. F. A. to be communicated with individually and it is hoped that those requiring help for the harvest will send their applications at once direct to the Secretary of the United Farmers of Alberta at Calgary, when the men will be despatched to the various points as rapidly as possible.

BORN

CHAMBERLAIN—On Monday, August 11th, 1913, at Calgary, to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Chamberlain, a son.

Very Bad, Indeed

Francis Wilson, at a luncheon in Grammercy Park, was congratulated on his French pronunciation.

I've been taken in my time, said Mr. Wilson, for a Parisian. This shows what perseverance will do. I had a hard time in the beginning to learn French.

In fact, in the beginning I was as hopeless as the chap whose French teacher said to him: Hereafter monsieur I can only teach you by correspondence.

Why? asked the pupil.

Because, said the teacher, if we keep on this way, your pronunciation will spoil mine.

New Rifle Sight a Boon to Hunters

Brainerd, Minn.—Recent trials made by A. H. Porsch and Frel Britton with the Remington Arms Company's new negative angle sight have proven quite satisfactory, says the Daily Dispatch. Using a target two feet wide and three feet high with a six inch bulls eye, each of these men fired eighty shots at the several ranges for which the sight is intended, and scored eighty hits each which, had the target been a deer, would have made a kill in each instance. Groups of five shots were made in several instances within a space that could have been covered with a twenty-five cent piece.

When the fact that the conditions under which these men made their trials were most aggravating, is considered, there being a strong wind of varying velocity blowing across the line of fire, the results obtained are admittedly most remarkable.

These men have proven to their satisfaction that the Remington negative angle sight is a success if used as it is intended to be used. It is a good sight for the man who shoots a rifle only occasionally and who is therefore rather unfamiliar with the judging of distances and the adjusting of sights to the distance estimated. Practice with a rifle on a fixed target should be indulged in by all hunters before going into the woods in order to familiarize themselves with the gun they expect to use and if more practice were indulged in by hunters before going to the woods there would be a larger percentage of kills made with a lower percentage of accidents.

The sight has not yet been placed on the market.

Miller's Worm Powders, being in demand everywhere, can be got at any chemist's or drug shop, at very small cost. They are a standard remedy for worm troubles and can be fully relied upon to expel worms from the system and abate the sufferings that worms cause. There are many mothers that rejoice that they found available so effective a remedy for the relief of their children.

Praise for Young Astor

When Vincent Astor says: It is better to have dead grass in the parks than dead children in the tenements, he proves that a young man can inherit millions without getting soft hands and a hard face, to use Mr. Roosevelt's expression.

It is especially gratifying to know that this particular young man, who is in a position to do great good, has broad sympathies and a real understanding of the purposes of public playgrounds.

If more young men of the same sort took this same democratic attitude Park Keeper Stover would receive fewer complaints from people who think it more important to have grass above the ground than children above ground.

Vincent Astor has inherited good sense and sound Americanism.

Young Astor has inherited vast properties in New York, many of them tenement properties. His attitude in the matter of the parks gives promise that these will be administered on humanitarian principles and that the great influence he can gain in municipal affairs will be exerted in behalf of people not so fortunately born as he.

Minard's Liniment Cures Distemper

Duel Scars Without a Duel

A German business firm has printed an advertisement in which it offers to imitate the scars obtained in university duels. Every one knows those facial disfigurements which are so prized by the Teuton, but it is difficult to say which is the more striking the enterprise of the German firm which offers to decorate men's faces with imitation wounds of honor, or the vanity of the men who accept the offer.

In Germany these scars are held to enhance manly beauty, and they confer a special cachet on the disfigured one. But hitherto scars have been the result of sabre wounds and not of a process without pain or interruption to business.

How the Leader Was Drilled

As the motor car approached the street corner a young man sprang directly in front of it, and waving his arms, cried: Now come on, will you? The car struck him squarely in the chest and threw him 10 feet ahead. Rising quickly he rushed at the car again and was thrown ahead again. He was about to make another rush when a policeman caught hold of him. What's the matter with you? growled the constable. Off your head? Not at all, replied the young man. I have been appointed to lead the suffragettes' next big raid and I was only just getting myself into condition.

Pipe Stems

It seems curious to reflect, in view of the universal use of vulcanite as pipe mouthpieces, that this material was quite unknown a few years ago. Prepared, as everybody knows, from India-rubber, it is undoubtedly the most durable and serviceable material pipe mouthpieces. For many years these were made from the vulcanite run into moulds while hot, and afterwards trimmed and polished. A very great improvement was effected, says the Cigar and Tobacco World, when it was discovered that a much harder and better article, and one capable of taking a higher polish, could be produced by cutting from the solid block of vulcanite. The so-called block is a slab of about four feet by two feet and 1-2 inch or 3-4 inch in thickness. These slabs are first cut by fine circular saws into narrow strips of the required size, subdivided as to length, turned in the lathe, trimmed by files, bored and finally polished in readiness to be affixed to the pipes. A little heat carefully applied is all that is necessary for bending vulcanite.

An Oil Without Alcohol.—Some oils and many medicines have alcohol as a prominent ingredient. A judicious mingling of six essential oils compose the famous Dr. Thomas' Eclectic Oil, and there is no alcohol in it, so that its effects are lasting. There is no medicinal oil compounded that can equal this oil in its preventive and healing power.

The Wedding Ring in France

At present, says Mme. Claire de Pratz in 'France from Within,' many Frenchwomen who have been educated in the public laicized schools refuse to wear this symbol of their bond (a wedding ring), so that there are many married women in France who wear no wedding ring at all—a terrible heresy indeed, in the eyes of some Anglo-Saxons. The French wedding ring, the author adds, is generally made in two parts, the wife wearing one and the husband the other, both rings being blessed at the altar when there is a religious ceremony.

Ferry Across Panama Canal

Paradoxical though it seems, the first task for the army engineers after they have succeeded in severing the continents of North and South America by the Panama canal will be to re-establish the connection. It is necessary that communication by rail be retained unimpaired between the north and south banks of the canal, especially if the railway systems of North and South America are to be linked so as to afford unbroken connection between New York and Buenos Aires. Bridges high enough above the canal to permit of the passage of ocean-going vessels with their lofty masts, are out of the question, while a plan to tunnel under the canal has been abandoned because of the great cost. Finally the decision has been made to a system of large steam car ferries constituting a gigantic ferry, which probably will be located near Camp Elliott.

Minard's Liniment Cures Garget in Cows

One of the things which helps swell the traveller's expenses, both in this country and abroad, is the extra. It may or may not be charged in the bill, but it is sure to be paid for. Probably even the most generous traveller however, will have some sympathy for the gentleman in the following story, who was made to pay liberally for a certain annoying privilege.

During his stay at the hotel the weather had been very hot.

Charles, said the landlord to the clerk who was making out the bill to be presented to the departing guest, have you noticed that the gentleman in No. 7 has consulted the thermometer on the piazza at least ten times every morning during his stay here? Charles replied that he had.

Well, said the landlord, charge him the price of one dinner a day for the use of the thermometer.

A Direct Hint

Well, Johnny, my dear, how are you getting on with your French? Oh, very well, uncle. We translate quite nice sensible sentences now, such as: My uncle never allows my birthday to pass without giving me a present, or it is certain that my uncle will give me something quite splendid this time.

George's lawyer (to colored prisoner)—Well, Ras, so you want me to defend you. Have you got any money? Ras—No; but I've got a mule and a few chickens, and a hog or two.

Lawyer—Those will do very nicely. Now, let me see, what do they accuse you of? Ras—Oh, a mule, and a few chickens, and a hog or two.

Hats and Architecture

It has been pointed out that the form of the hat bears a certain relation to buildings of a primitive nature—huts. A distinguished architect has invited attention to the curious resemblance that has existed and that is still to be found in many countries between headgear and habitations or other buildings. It may be that the same taste, or the lack of it, has given rise to the similarity of style, or in the beginning the designer of the hat may have taken the hut as a model.

In the Hawaiian Islands long before the inhabitants took the trouble to clothe themselves, they built grass houses, and at the present time the characteristic Hawaiian hat is remarkably like the hut.

The turbans of the dignitaries of the Eastern Church are still of the shape of those worn by the high priests among the Jews of olden times, and they are extraordinarily like the characteristic Comes that surmount mosques. Again, it is pointed out, the high pointed spires of Gothic churches were contemporaneous with the high hornlike headresses known as the heennia. It is believed, too, that like results may be found after a comparison of other styles of architecture with the headgear of the period where in they flourished.

An old darkey was encountered by the expedition sent by Uncle Sam for the relief of sufferers by the Mississippi floods. Uncle Eph was in a dilapidated looking skiff or dugout, which he was having considerable trouble to keep afloat. He was busy paddling with one hand and bailing out his craft with the other when the relief boat came within hailing distance of him. The captain of the relief boat called to him: Hello there, uncle! What do you want? Nothing but wings, boss, was the answer.

Westcott

The cool wet weather of the past week will delay grain cutting. Had it remained warm some grain would have been cut this week.

Mrs. John Hunter who has been ailing for some time is improving lately.

Miss Ethel Dolman is spending a few weeks in Calgary.

Bert Dolman of Red Deer was home on a visit for a few days this week.

The Cremona and Westcott Band held its first annual meeting at Garfield on Monday night. The treasurer's report showed an expenditure of almost thirteen hundred dollars, including instruments, for the past year, which goes to show the energy with which this new organization took hold of things, and to judge by the tone of the meeting this district will have a splendid band in the near future. Mr. Henry Tuggle, J. H. Brown, John Bellamy and J. F. Moir of Westcott, were present, and while congratulating the president and members for their success during the past year, also thanked them for introducing into the district a thing of so great an educational value to all who are willing to take advantage of it. Mr. Gathercole also came in for his share of praise for the splendid interest he took in the band as instructor since its beginning.

If you are a housewife you cannot reasonably hope to be healthy or beautiful by washing dishes, sweeping and doing housework all day, and crawling into bed dead tired at night. You must get out into the open air and sunlight. If you do this every day and keep your stomach and bowels in good order by taking Chamberlain's Tablets when needed, you should become both healthy and beautiful. For sale by all dealers.

Swalwell

The Alberta Farmers Co-operative Elevator Company meeting at Swalwell was well attended. The directors were chosen by ballot and the other necessary business transacted. The shares are all taken up and an early start on the elevator is certain.

Crops are looking fine throughout this district. If the weather continues favorable oats and barley will be ready for cutting in a few days.

Some fine stands of wheat may be seen here. It is hoped that they will be cut in time to grade No. 1.

The G.T.R. has been ballasted and the train service to Calgary is expected in about a fortnight's time. All passengers at present have to change to C.P.R. at Beiseker.

The general store at Grainger was destroyed by fire a few days ago.

Some trouble having arisen in Swalwell over the water, it was decided by the residents that a public well be put down. Siebert's outfit is now busy drilling.

A tennis club has been formed and a court laid down. The local sports are becoming enthusiasts but the play isn't of a high order.

Cupid is doing great execution here and if the present marriage rate continues, the single ladies will be all gone.

It is understood that the Government telephone service will not be extended north from here to Twining and Three Hills this year. There is some disappointment. We should have appreciated direct service to these places.

The Swalwell Telephone Co. are considering the means of connecting with Government phone, so that the farmers can call long distance at home.

For soreness of the muscles, whether induced by violent exercise or injury, there is nothing better than Chamberlain's Liniment. This liniment also relieves rheumatic pains. For sale by all dealers.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at the office of any Local Agent of Dominion Lands (not sub-agent), on certain conditions. Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required in every case, except when residence is performed in the vicinity. In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Six months residence in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and 50 acres extra cultivation. The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land after report by Homestead Inspector on application for patent. A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 80 acres and erect a house worth $300.

In the Train

Murgatroyd and Jordan jumped into a first-class smoking compartment, which happened to be empty. Half sovereign to the guard practically assured the permanence of those conditions until the journey was accomplished. They had booked for Waterloo. The carriage Muller had got into was in the fore part of the train, while theirs was near the centre. For an express it was a fairly long train. The guard brought them papers as Murgatroyd did not wish to go to the book-stall. It was something—a point to the good—that, as far as they could judge, the pursued had not realised that any one was on his track.

As yet Murgatroyd had had no time for thought. From the moment Jordan had told him the news of Muller's sudden departure it had been all action, and vigorous absorbing action too. Now there was opportunity for thought, and the occasion demanded it.

He ate his sandwiches in silence. There were plenty for both; but Jordan declined the offer of some. He had already breakfasted—Murgatroyd shrewdly guessed—at Mr. Muller's expense. It was a little suggestive of victualling in time of war in an enemy's country.

Murgatroyd lighted a cigar when he had finished his improvised meal. It assisted his thoughts. He knew that morning as the express train bore him swiftly along through the red hills and frost-bound valleys of Devon, as he had not known it any time the last few days, that a great change had come over his life. He might write leaders in the Pioneer again, go back to his old chambers in Henrietta Street, and once more lunch at his club, but a change had come. The old Murray Murgatroyd, of the Inner Temple, and of the Pioneer, had undergone a radical transformation. His pursuit of Muller and determination to wrest from him, by hook or by crook, the papers he had been commissioned to obtain, were only parts of a complex hegemony. His life had been changed by a note of three lines with its resultant consequences. There was a power at the back of him which was a surging, swirling stream to some rudderless craft tossed upon its bosom. The two strongest forces which can determine a man's life—ambition and love—had come into his. The latter was wholly new; the former was only aroused to fuller activity, endowed with a new power, stimulated with a new hope. Yet to attain an end, the means must be kept in view; and the means to success seemed at the present moment further away than ever.

The memory of that first conversation with Sir Richard Hanley was very strong upon Murgatroyd now—and the touch of his daughter's hand was hardly less distinct as she looked up in his eyes, and told him she trusted him to get back the watch which had been her mother's.

Murgatroyd had been brought up entirely outside the sphere of woman's influence. His mother had died when he was a baby. He had no sisters. But Maud Hanley had captivated his imagination, hitherto strangely dormant in this particular direction. She combined a certain strength of judgment and character, and a knowledge of affairs, with the innocence, freshness, and delicate beauty of youth. She was capable of being a companion to a man breasting the waves of the political sea, yet had lost none of the naïveté of maturing girlhood. Yet as he thought of her he felt strangely despondent. He was no nearer—in fact, further away from—the attainment of his object than when he first came west. It had been abundantly clear to him that Muller must not escape his vigilance; but how was he to get the documents from him in London, which he had failed to wrest from him in Tormouth?

That Jordan held practically the key of the situation, he was as yet of course, quite unaware.

The strangely-assorted pair had gone for the best part of an hour in silence, Jordan enjoying the seventh heaven with which opium endows its votaries while still on earth. Every now and then his beady black eyes rested on Murgatroyd's face opposite him. In spite of his calling, Jordan was a true comrade. He had entered into this adventure with zest, and in the course of it had conceived a more than common regard for his employer. Not that he would have confessed it for an instant; for sentiment of any kind was not allowed to disturb the serenity of his scheme of existence. It was Jordan who broke the spell of silence.

A fine country, sir!

You're an admirer of nature, Jordan? Murgatroyd spoke with a half-malicious twinkle in his eye.

My sympathies are that way. When I retire, it will be to a hen-roost and a kitchen garden.

I did not know your tastes were bucolic, not to say idyllic. When a man has once written for the Pioneer, it is astonishing how it vitiates his style. I don't know about that. I think there's amusement even in pigs—especially young pigs. Jordan was not wont to confess that there was anything he failed to understand.

Murgatroyd changed the subject. We must settle on some plan of campaign, Jemmy. I don't quite see how we are going to get inside that portmanteau; and when we get to town minutes will be golden. It will be a case of now or never.

If Muller does not slip up, and clever as he is I don't fancy he will do that quite—I don't see any particular difficulty. It seems to me that Muller will open that portmanteau himself.

That's not likely. I tried him as hard as anybody could. He simply hates England. You must think of something better than that, Jordan. Muller will open it quick enough if you stick the persuaders into him.

Perhaps you will suggest the exact treatment to be followed. It passes the bounds of my somewhat feeble imagination, answered Murgatroyd, with sarcastic emphasis.

Jordan's habitual cocksureness was particularly aggravating at this juncture, when he was clearly wrong.

Knowledge is power, the copybook says, and in this case they are right enough. As we happen to know a good deal about what's in that bag I rather fancy Muller will throw up the sponge. No one ever held on to the stakes with a corner of the king sticking out of his sleeve.

This is all Greek to me. Muller knows I could tell him exactly what those Transalpine papers have got in them; but what does he care! I can prove nothing without a copy made and certified, and that I can't get. Don't talk nonsense when we want the best sense you've got about you. Do not forget your reward is at stake as well.

I should like to see the thing through any way. Jordan felt injured in the region of his amour propre. The fact is, sir, he went on, after a moment's pause, there's more inside the leather of that trunk than any one knows of except two persons.

Murgatroyd had thrown the end of his cigar through the window of the carriage, and was listening intently. It had dawned upon him that Jordan had something really valuable to communicate.

And those two persons are? No less than me and Muller. There is a jeetle difference between us though, seeing as I know Muller knows it and he doesn't know I know it; in fact, he is not aware of the existence of no such individual.

Now, Jordan, drop all this mystery and tell me exactly all you know. Murgatroyd had put on what would have been his cross-questioning look had he practised at his profession.

We were talking of Mr. Muller the other morning, sir, and I told you I thought he was up to a game or two with that dapper little yacht, lying so low at Tormouth—quiet, remote, little Tormouth, as the advertisements put it.

I remember. I made it my business to find out that little game.

Well? Mr. Muller has had some pretty little maps made, and some useful information put together—with regard to the coast. You understand?

I think I see what you mean. Information which might be useful—say valuable, interjected Jordan.

Well, valuable—in time of war. But there's no war now.

No, but there might be to-morrow. Clouds are about in plenty. Besides, it's in time of peace these things get sold. When war is up there's no time for a bargain—specially nowadays when the biggest war don't last no time.

Murgatroyd was turning things over in his mind. A great many small things, dovetailed together, convinced him that Jordan was on the right track and presently he asked.

How did you find all this out?

I was up at Highdene last night—lathish—when the yacht's crew came home—a pretty hot lot of villains they was, too. Muller is a king to them, and he's not a beauty. Why, I was the only honest man there and I was not there so to speak—I was under the table.

Murgatroyd smiled at Jordan's evidently sincere appreciation of himself. They would have made it hot for you, if you had been discovered.

I'm pretty smart with a sharpshooter. I had a barrel for each of them—and two to spare in case of accidents. I had my revolver. It's that handy I sometimes wish I'd never parted with it.

Thanks. The train had now slowed up at Salisbury. Jordan from his place facing the engine saw Muller get out and go to the refreshment room. They had ten minutes to wait. Murgatroyd determined not to show himself, so Jordan snatched a hasty meal at the bar, having first provisioned his companion with a luncheon basket.

Wedding Invitations

An invitation to a wedding should be printed on heavy white paper, folded once, and enclosed in an envelope of the same size, and this placed in the address envelope. The address should never be typewritten, no matter how many invitations are issued. Special written invitations are often sent, and these should be immediately acknowledged in a few words of acceptance or a note of regret if unable to attend. An invited guest need not necessarily send a present, but it is a pretty courtesy to do so, even though the offering be but a bouquet of flowers, as a token of cordiality and congratulations.

FOUND A WAY

To Be Clear of Tea and Coffee Troubles

"Husband and myself both had the coffee habit, and finally his stomach and kidneys got in such a bad condition that he was compelled to give up a good position that he had held for years. He was too sick to work. His skin was yellow and there didn't seem to be an organ in his body that was not affected."

Tea is just as harmful because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.

"I told him I felt sure his sickness was due to coffee and after some discussion he decided to give it up."

"It was a struggle, because of the powerful habit. One day we heard about Postum and concluded to try it and then it was easy to leave off coffee."

"His fearful headaches grew less frequent, his complexion began to clear, kidneys grew better until at last he was a new man altogether, as a result of leaving off coffee and taking up Postum. Then I began to drink it too."

"Although I was never as bad off as my husband, I was always very nervous and never at any time very strong, only weighing 95 lbs. before I began to use Postum. Now I weigh 115 lbs. and can do as much work as anyone my size, I think."

Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont. Write for booklet, "The Road to Wellville."

Postum comes in two forms. Regular Postum (must be boiled).

Instant Postum doesn't require boiling, but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in an ordinary cup of hot water, which makes it right for most persons.

A big cup requires more and some people who like strong things put in a heaping spoonful and temper it with a large supply of cream.

Experiment until you know the amount that pleases your palate and have it served that way in the future. "There's a Reason" for Postum.

Tickling a Shark

Tickling a shark in order to make the fish amenable to capture is a singular practice among the natives of the island of Tahiti. A writer in the New York Sun, who watched the hazardous sport while seated in a canoe manned by two natives thus describes it:

Peering into the clear water, where you can see to a depth of four or five fathoms, you catch a glimpse far down among the sea ferns and coral cups of the long, lithe tail of a shark, and of a huge pectoral fin that sways continually with a sidewise motion, and sends up little ripples to the surface.

The native diver picks up a coil of cocoanut fibre with a slipknot already tied in it, seizes a knife in his teeth, and quietly slips into the water. It is done with wonderful skill. The native keeps close to the reef and lets himself down through the water by means of the sea growths till he is right over the waving tail. Slowly a black hand stretches out, and starting behind the pectoral fin, begins to run his hand along the body of the shark and the fin sways more rapidly.

Again the hand moves forward, and as it strokes the fish, the other hand leaves the slipknot hanging loosely near the spread of the tail. Then the native comes quietly to the surface, and the spectator breathes freely again. The sail is set, the steersman takes his place on the outrigger, and the diver in the bow, with a yell of Hula, pulls hard on the rope.

On the occasion that I speak of, the shark splashed about in wild frenzy for a moment or two, and then settled down to a tour of the lagoon. Twice he circled about, and the canoe plowed along, with the water bubbling and frothing at the bow where the keen-eyed native intently watched the tightening rope. Suddenly it slackened and the diver went over the side like a flash, with a knife in his hand. A minute later the surface of the water was a brilliant red and the native was scrambling back into the canoe. We towed the shark to the beach and measured him. He was sixteen feet long.

Europe Has 160,000 M.D.'S

The Monteur Medical has just compiled statistics on the number of physicians in Europe. The total number is given as 160,000, divided as follows: England has seven physicians for every 10,000 inhabitants; Germany, 5; France, 5.1; and Italy 5. Of course the larger numbers of physicians are found in the cities and among them Brussels has the largest, 24 for every 10,000 inhabitants, while Amsterdam has only two in the same proportion.

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited. Gentlemen,—Last August my horse was badly cut in eleven places by a barbed wire fence. Three of the cuts (small ones) healed soon, but the others became foul and rotten, and though I tried many kinds of medicine they had no beneficial result. Casting his eye around he fixed on Private Murphy as his first victim. "Private Murphy, be asked, why should a soldier be ready to die for his country?"

The Irishman scratched his head for a while; then an ingratiating smile flitted across his face. "Sure, Captain, he said pleasantly, you are quite right. Why should he?"

Facts in Nature

FOR centuries it has been known that Nature's most valuable health giving agents for the cure of disease are found in our American forests. Over forty years ago Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute at Buffalo, N.Y., used the powdered extracts as well as the liquid extracts of native medicinal plants, such as Bloodroot and Queen's root, Golden Seal and Stone root, Cherry bark and Mandrake, for the cure of blood diseases. This prescription as put up in liquid form was called Hair Dry and Lifeless. Almost All Hair Out on One Side of Head. Used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. Hair Coming in Nicely and Scales All Gone.

176 Adelaide St., St. John, N. B.—"I cured my little boy of a bad case of dandruff with Cuticura Soap and Ointment."

The dandruff formed on his head soon after birth. The hair was dry and lifeless and almost all out on one side of his head. I washed the little head twice a day with warm water and Cuticura Soap, dried it, and very carefully applied the Cuticura Ointment and in about an hour took a very fine little comb and the dandruff would lift off in sheets and some of the hair would come too. Then I would put some Cuticura Ointment on and let it remain till time to wash the head again. I used a large box of Cuticura Ointment with the Cuticura Soap and his hair was coming in nicely and the scales all gone. Today he has as nice a head of hair and as free from dandruff as you would wish to see." (Signed) Mrs. C. F. Keast, May 20, 1912.

THE CAMERA HUNT

An Incident and a Discovery
Not on the Program.

By HONORE WILLISIE.

Penelope took a long breath and started on after her brother and his wife, who were chatting with the guide. After the rough climbing of the morning the little plateau seemed heavenly. But even this respite did not ease Penelope's sense of irritation. Arthur's and Alice's had seemed so amusing at first that she had readily accepted their invitation to join them. To hunt the wild game of the Rockies with a camera was unique enough to be interesting, but the hunt of the long tailed deer, so high among the peaks that rapid work was misery, had been very bad. The three days' chase for a snip at the black wolf had been worse, and it ended in failure. But this chase for a mountain sheep was trying Penelope beyond endurance.

"It's easy for Alice," thought poor Penelope, digging her staff viciously into a crevice. "She's like a bundle of steel wires. She loves to get up before daylight and crawl half a mile on her hands and knees to wait at a spring for some silly beast to come for a drink. But I'm just worn out. Alice! Arthur!"

The three enthusiasts ahead turned back. "You three leave me here in the shade of this rock and come back for me when you are finished. I am worn out."

Arthur looked at Penelope in dismay. "But don't you want to see a mountain sheep?" he coaxed. "Since the black tailed deer were in the river bottom this morning the sheep are sure to be up here. Just think, Penelope, one of those curious, rare mountain sheep!"

But even this vision failed to move his sister. She shook her head. Alice gave a resigned little sigh.

"I'll stay with you, Penelope," she said.

"No, you won't," said Arthur hastily. "It's not safe. Two women are no better than one here."

Here the guide interposed. He had been with them but a day, but already, besides being their guide, he was their counselor and friend. He was too well bred to be treated otherwise. Penelope looked at the stalwart, heavily bearded fellow in a troubled way. His resemblance to Dick in spite of the beard was startling.

"Now, I tell you, Mr. Seymour," he said, "you know as much about this business as I do, and you tell me you have been up this trail half a dozen times before. Why can't I stay here with your sister, fix up camp for the night and let Mr. and Mrs. Seymour go on and locate the sheep?"

"Good, good!" exclaimed Seymour. Mrs. Seymour looked a little dubious, but Penelope spoke eagerly. Here was a chance for an hour or two of rest that was not to be foregone.

"It will only be a couple of hours," she said pleadingly. "You will be back before dark, and I am so tired, and," she added artfully, "you may miss your only chance at the mountain sheep."

"Come on, Arthur," said Mrs. Seymour, and the two started off up the mountain.

The little plateau on which the colloquy had taken place was smooth and wide, with a little spring trickling out of the great wall of the mountain. Penelope sat quietly watching the distant peaks in the afternoon light while the guide set about his preparation for the night's camp, watching Penelope surreptitiously the while. Very lovely was the sunlight on the masses of her hair, the quick glow of color in her cheeks, the delight in her eyes as she looked at the distant glory of the canyon walls.

Finally her gaze wandered to the guide as his work brought him close beside her, and again the troubled look came to her eyes.

"Do you know," she said abruptly, "you have a resemblance to some one I used to know that is startling."

The guide straightened himself and looked at her keenly. "Is that so?" he said in his quiet way.

Without knowing why, she added, "It was some one who was very dear to me."

"And now?" said the guide tentatively.

"There is no now," said Penelope, rising and walking toward the edge of the plateau.

The guide watched her anxiously. "Not too near the edge, please," he called.

Penelope did not answer. Far, far below curled the silvery line that was the river, then up and up chaos of color in the rock masses, and silence, silence so intense that, though every sense was keen to catch the primality of the canyon coloring, Penelope stood counting her own heart beats. She leaned over a little to look at the ledge below her.

And then the thing happened—a sudden vertigo, a hoarse cry from behind her, a sense of endless falling, then unconsciousness.

After ages of nothingness she opened her eyes—far above, the sky with a glory of sun and snow, a grandeur of distant peaks and far horizon, then a sense of pain and with it a man's voice calling:

"Penelope! Penelope!" And above the brown grown ledge on which she lay a man's face looked down upon her.

"Here I am! I'm all right!" she called back weakly.

"Will you lie perfectly still while I get the rope?" called the guide. "For heaven's sake, don't move!" And the face disappeared, leaving Penelope alone with the blue above and the far circling of an eagle about the crags.

Then a rope with a carefully adjusted slip noose dangled beside her. "Can you put it over your head and under your arms?" the guide called. "For my sake, Penelope, be careful! And look up at me all the time. Don't look down into the canyon."

Too bruised and shaken to be surprised, Penelope took the noose with trembling fingers and tried to disentangle herself from the brush which had broken her fall. Slowly, inch by inch, with pain at every motion, she raised herself to a sitting position, then little by little adjusted the noose under her arms to the guide's satisfaction.

"Now," he called, "I'm going to lower your staff to you, and you must keep yourself from brushing the wall by means of it as I pull you up."

The fear and misery of that trip back to the plateau Penelope was never to forget. The rope cut into her chest until she would have fainted with the pain had not the difficulty of warding herself from the wall with her alpenstock forced her to keep her senses alert. Now, with a quick jerk, she was pulled upward for a few feet; then a pause, while the rope twisted her dizzily, with now a view of the serenity of the opposite canyon wall in the afternoon sun; now the yellow dampness of stone within an inch of her face, then another violent jerk upward.

As she paused within a foot or so of the plateau level she closed her eyes and dropped her staff. Then a pair of arms lifted her slowly, tenderly, and laid her on the ground, then carefully removed the rope.

Penelope opened her eyes. "Dick!" she said hesitatingly. "Dick!"

"Are you hurt?" asked the guide unheeding. "What shall I do? Shall I go after your sister?"

"I think there are no bones broken," said Penelope weakly. "I am only terribly bruised and shaken. How I am to get down the mountain again I don't know."

"Oh, we can arrange that easily," answered the guide eagerly as he adjusted the steamer rug on which she lay.

Again Penelope's senses dimmed. "You do look so like Dick," she murmured. "Aren't you Dick? Only Dick was not so strong?"

"Tell me about Dick," said the guide, with a hand that trembled so that a cup of water he had brought sprinkled her gown.

Penelope looked at him with puzzled, half delirious eyes. "Dick? Why, Dick was my husband, and after we had our silly quarrel he went to Europe. That was three years ago."

The guide threw aside the cup. "Do you think it was a silly quarrel?" he cried. "Would you forgive Dick?"

"Yes," answered Penelope, "if only I could find him."

The guide stooped and lifted the slender, aching body into his arms. "Here I am, dear," he said. "Here is Dick! I was never Europe, after all. I came here, where I could work and be forgotten."

Penelope looked into his face, forgetting her pain in the wonder of it all. "I must have known it," she said, "in spite of the beard."

Then she closed her eyes on his shoulder. "Sheep hunting is not bad, after all," she said. And Dick held her close.

Newton's Apple Tree.

It is impossible to say at this late day how true or how false is the old story about Newton's apple tree at Woolsthorpe, from which he is supposed to have seen the fall of the apple which gave him his first thought of the attraction of gravity. Voltaire is the authority for the well-known story. He claims that the story was told to him by Catherine Barton, Newton's niece. How much truth there may be in the tale will never be known, but it seems to be certain that tradition marked a tree as that from which the famous apple fell till 1820, when, owing to decay, the tree was cut down.

Agreed With Him.

"Why is she so angry with him?" "Because he agreed with her." "You mean disagreed." "I mean what I said. She remarked that of course she was not perfect, and he agreed with her."

ORIGIN OF AN OLD SAYING.

How "He Will Never Set the River on Fire" Got Its Start.

Whenever we say of anyone, "he will never set the river on fire," we mean, of course, that he is not a very intelligent or industrious person and that he will never do anything very brilliant or worth remembering. This would lead some to think that because of this old saying someone sometime actually did set the river on fire, or else it would lead us to believe that it originated with a pessimist who believed big deeds were impossible.

As a matter of fact this saying, when it originated, had nothing whatever to do with a river. The original saying was: "He will never set the 'temse' on fire." Now, a 'temse' was a wooden sieve so fixed that it would fit in the top of a flour barrel and sift the flour by revolving. And those days the milling of flour was decidedly imperfect, and every bit of flour had to be thoroughly sifted before it could be used.

Sometimes a very energetic person sifting a lot of flour in one of these old-time, well-dried sieves or 'temses' would revolve it so rapidly that the friction would cause it to smoke and perhaps begin to burn a little on the bearings.

When people were speaking of an unusually lazy or worthless sort of man they would say jokingly: "He will never set the 'temse' on fire," meaning that he was too lazy to put enough energy into sifting flour to make the sifter or 'temse' catch fire. This saying originated in England, and as everyone knows, the great river there is the Thames, which is pronounced exactly the same as 'temse.' So that's how it happened. "He will never set the 'temse' on fire" was easily changed by later generations who knew nothing of the ancient sifter to "He will never set the 'Thames' on fire" and the final twist became "He will never set the river on fire."

Automatic Distress Signal.

Scientists and persons engaged in or connected with seafaring are greatly interested by the announcement of Raymond Phillips, an English inventor, that he has perfected an instrument which may revolutionize methods of sending distress signals at sea.

Mr. Phillips calls the new apparatus the wireless harmonophone.

When used to transmit a signal of distress the harmonophone, according to the inventor, sets in operation a siren, which can be heard all over a ship of any size whatever.

The action of the harmonophone in releasing the valve of the siren is automatic, and no attendant therefore is necessary.

A peculiar feature of the apparatus is that signals sent by it take precedence over all other wireless messages, for it cuts off all messages being received by any vessel within its reach.

Thus, regardless of whether any ship's wireless is working, the siren will receive the distress signal from another ship in misfortune and make it known immediately.

The mechanism of the invention is a secret, known only to the inventor, but tests have shown that Mr. Phillips undoubtedly has perfected an instrument of incalculable value.

Mr. Phillips is an electrical engineer, and the wireless harmonophone is not the first of his inventions to attract public notice.

King at Woolwich.

Appropos of the recent royal visit to Woolwich, it is interesting to recall that probably the first visit of the present King to the neighborhood of Woolwich was that which he paid to the new Warspite as a boy of twelve in 1877. The old training ship had been burnt a few years earlier, and Prince George, with his brother, the Duke of Clarence, and their father, went down to see the new ship and signed their names in the book.

Woolwich is really the cradle of the British navy, and dates its rise to importance as a dockyard from the launching of the Great Harry in 1512. It was under the Government of the famous Peter and Christopher Pett, in the reigns of James I. and the Charles's, that Woolwich came to rank for a while as premier arsenal of England.

Where a Rainbow Touches the Earth.

In every country in the world rainbow folklore declares that some object of value may be found where the ends of the beautiful arch touch the earth. In Suabia the ends are said to rest on bowls of gold; in Hungary, that cups of silver will be found at the spot where they come in contact with the earth. In Switzerland it is said that a shoe cast over the rainbow will come to the ground on the other side filled to overflowing with gold. In Bosnia it is said that if iron or other base metal happens to be at the spot where the bow touches the ground it will be instantly transformed to pure gold. In many parts of Germany, Poland, Russia, Belgium and Holland it is said to be a golden key that may be found at "the end of the bow." In Portugal and Spain they speak of the "silver hen" having her nest where the bow rests, and in Norway it comes to the ground at a spot where a golden bowl and a silver spoon are hidden. In many of the chief European countries it is said that water touched by the rainbow will cure skin and insanity.

GENERAL DUMAS VANISHED.

Mystery of a Missing Relative of the Great Novelist.

One of the most mysterious disappearances on record is recalled by the sale at public auction of the effects of General Alexandre Dumas, a relative of the great novelist, who has not been seen for about a year and a half.

In October, 1911, the general, who was sixty-eight years old and lived quietly with his wife in the suburbs of Paris, left his home one afternoon and vanished. The police and private detectives searched the country and seemed to make it clear that the missing general could not have been murdered, but voluntarily left his family without giving any reason.

Traces of him have, it is supposed, been found in Brussels and also in Aix-la-Chapelle.

In spite of his age General Dumas was at the disposition of the minister of war, and if he is still living he has committed a serious offense in not letting the military authorities know his whereabouts. Meanwhile his pension is accumulating at the war office. The general opinion seems to be that he is hiding abroad, although no reason is assigned for his voluntary absence.

The case will soon be brought before a military tribunal on the ground of the illegal absence of the vanished general. He had a brilliant career, having served with distinction in the Franco-Prussian war and also in the Tonkin, Sudan and Dahomey campaigns. He is a grand officer of the Legion of Honor. — Paris Cor. New York Times.

MONARCHS OF MONEY.

None of Our Millionaires Can Out rival the Rothschilds.

"The actual power of the Rothschilds today," says Ignatius Ballo in "The Romance of the Rothschilds," "cannot be compared with that of the five brothers in earlier days, though their fortune is larger than ever. This is due, however, not to a depreciation of ability in their descendants, but to a change of circumstances."

"The financial position of the various states in Europe has so immeasurably improved during the last 100 years that they no longer need an intermediary in contracting loans. Rival banks have also done their share in bringing to a close the supremacy of the Rothschilds."

"But if their autocracy in the money world is ended their vast fortune remains and surpasses that of any of the American millionaires. Neither Rockefeller nor Carnegie nor Astor nor any other transatlantic prince of finance has a capital equal to that of the Rothschilds. It is estimated at more than £400,000,000 sterling ($2,000,000,000), and this enormous mountain of wealth is rapidly increasing daily."

A German Explosive.

In Germany, where disappointment has attended the employment of acetylene for illuminating purposes, use has been found for the gas in the form of an explosive for blasting. Carbide of calcium in particles is inclosed in a tin cartridge, the upper part containing water separated from the carbide by a partition. At the top of the cartridge is an electric percussion device. An iron pin worked from outside of the cartridge perforates the partition and allows the water to come in contact with the carbide. This is effected by a blow five minutes before it is desired to cause an explosion. At the end of that time, sufficient gas having been developed in the cartridge, the electric spark is fired and the explosion occurs. The effect in blasting is said to be the rending of the rock with innumerable cracks, so that the fragments are easily removed. — Boston Post.

The Passing of Hemp.

Not far distant is the day when what was once a great and important crop will have died down to nothingness—American hemp. Though raised here since the earliest colonial days, it is now passing into the limbo of forgotten things. Cotton has replaced hempen homespun for clothing, and steamers with wire rigging now plow the seven seas instead of wooden ships rigged with hempen ropes. Most rope now made is of abaca or Manila hemp. Jute has replaced hemp for cotton bale coverings, sacks, carpet warp, webbing and twines, and perhaps—quite as important—hemp land can be made to grow other and more profitable crops. The more widely adaptable cotton and the cheaper priced jute have doomed the American hemp industry. — New York World.

The Cornhill Magazine some time ago gave some delightful examples of mixed metaphors. Here is one. Sir Richard Purvis, addressing his old constituents at Peterborough in defence of an Act of Parliament under whose operation some of them had gone to prison for a week, said: "That, gentlemen, is the marrow of the Education Act, and will not be taken out by Dr. Clifford, or anybody else. It is founded on a granite foundation, and it speaks in a voice not to be drowned by sectarian clamor."

DAME FASHION.

Waistcoats Are a Conspicuous Detail.

SMART OUTING COAT.

This jaunty coat of coq de roche serge makes a brilliant dash of color against an out of door background and the vivid red of the model is particularly effective in combination with a dainty frock of machine embroidered batiste.

Sheet and Pillowcase Shower.

A young woman who belonged to a sewing club composed of six members announced her engagement, and the other members planned this most unique shower, to which they asked the men—that is, each asked an escort. These girls conceived the happy idea which made this affair a reality.

Each one made a pair of sheets and a pair of pillowcases. Then, arrayed in these ghostly garments, they presented themselves at the house of the bride elect. They all met at the house next door and dressed. The bride's mother had been taken into the secret and looked out for the refreshments, which the men had sent up. After the surprise was over and the white costumes taken off it was explained that the sheets and pillowcases would next be seen neatly laundered and tied up with sachets of lavender for the linen chest.

A Picnic Shelf.

A woman who gives her friends and children picnics during the spring and summer has a "picnic shelf," and she starts it just about now. She sets aside one shelf in her cupboard and puts on it many little things that one might otherwise throw away—the little cheese or olive bottles or a good shaped jam jar for packing picnic dainties. All the oiled paper from the packaged brands of biscuit is just as good as the bought kind in the roll, and these she saves. A mayonnaise bottle she refills with the homemade variety. Corks, attractive strings, candy and tin boxes she finds good use for later. Then she watches the magazines and papers for new picnic suggestions, and it is surprising how many new ideas for salad, sandwich and other dainty things she collects in this way.

The Most Modest of Men

Abraham Lincoln felt deeply the responsibility that rested on him as president of the United States, but he shrank from assuming any of the honors, or even the titles of his position.

After years of intimate acquaintance, public men testified shortly after Mr. Lincoln's death that he could not recall a single instance in which he spoke of himself as president, or used that title for himself, except he acted in an official capacity.

He always spoke of his position and office vaguely, as this place, here, or in other modest phrase. Once, speaking of the room at the Capitol used by the president of the United States at the close of a session of congress, he said: That room, you know, that they call—dropping his voice and hesitating—the president's room.

To an intimate friend who addressed him always by his own proper title, he said: Now call me Lincoln, and I'll promise not to tell of the breach of etiquette—if you won't—and I shall have a resting spell from Mr. President.

All persons agree that the most marked characteristic of Mr. Lincoln's manners was his simplicity and artlessness, but his native dignity never forsook him, and with all his angularities and disregard of conventionalities distinguished foreigners were invariably impressed by his fine fibre.

A diplomat, whose knowledge of courts was more perfect than that of the English language, said:

It seems to me one grand gentleman in disguise.

When Holloway's Corn Cure is applied to a corn or wart it kills the roots and the callosity comes out without injury to the flesh.

Along in the sixties Pat Casey pushed a wheelbarrow across the plains from St. Joseph, Mo., to Georgetown, Col. Shortly after that he struck it rich, in fact he was credited with having more wealth than anyone else in Colorado. A man of great shrewdness and ability, he was exceedingly sensitive over his inability to read or write. One day an old-timer met him with:

How are you getting along, Pat? Go away from me, now, said Pat, gonally, me head's bustin' wild business. It takes two lead pencils a day to do me wurruk.

Minard's Liniment Cures Diphtheria

An English physician, being annoyed by the talk of a pedantic, self-conceited bore until he could stand it no longer, remarked: My friend, you and I know all that there is to be known. How is that? asked the bore, highly pleased.

Why, said the doctor, you know everything except that you are a fool, and I know that.

For the Earache

I am afraid I have greatly interfered with my own practice, said a celebrated aurist, by giving the following advice to many of my friends: At the first symptoms of earache, let the patient lie on the bed with the painful ear uppermost. Fold a thick towel and tuck it around the neck; then with a teaspoon fill the ear with warm water. Continue doing this for fifteen or twenty minutes; the water will fill the ear orifice and flow over the head, let the water run out, and plug the ear with warm glycerin and cotton. This may be done every hour until relief is obtained. It is an almost invariable cure and has saved many cases of acute inflammation. The water should be quite warm, but not too hot.

NERVOUS TROUBLES ON THE INCREASE

They Are Due to an Impoverished Condition of the Blood

Nervous exhaustion—or neurasthenia, as medical men call it—is one of the greatest evils of the present day, for it is destroying the life and energy of thousands of men and women, or worse, driving them to insanity. The causes of this trouble include overwork, mental strain, worry, indiscretions, and sometimes it follows a gripe. The signs of this trouble are usually great weakness after any exertion, nervous headaches, trembling hands, shakiness in the legs, irritability of temper, weak digestive power, insomnia. The life of the sufferer becomes full of misery.

The true treatment for this trouble must consist of a building up process, for the above signs mean that the exhausted nerves are calling for more nourishment from the blood supply. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new rich blood that feeds the starved complaining nerves, and in this way they have cured thousands of times neurasthenia, neuralgia and other nervous disorders, and have restored strength and nerve-energy to despairing people.

Mrs. Isaac Wilson, Calabogie, Ont., gives thanks for having been restored to health through the use of this medicine, she says: "When I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I was a nervous wreck; I couldn't do my work, could not sleep at night, suffered from nervous headaches, and the least noise would completely upset me. Only those who have suffered from nervous trouble can tell what I endured. I doctored for a time, but did not get any benefit. Then I learned of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and sent for a half dozen boxes. By the time I had used these I was almost well, and a couple more boxes completely restored my health, and I have had no return of the trouble. I can cheerfully recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to those who suffered from any form of nervous trouble."

If you are weak, nervous or out of health begin to cure yourself today with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You can get them from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The London Daily Citizen publishes the following joke on itself: They are telling a good story about The Daily Citizen in Fleet Street, and as this is a paper not afraid of a joke against itself I shall be forgiven for repeating it. A bricklayer in a tramcar near the Elephant and Castle was reading The Daily Citizen, and a member of the staff who happened to be in the car was gratified by the fact. It is pleasant to see workers reading their own paper and learning about the conditions of their fellow workers. He leaned forward and got into conversation with the bricklayer and commented on the title of the journal he was looking at. Ay, ay, said the loyal reader, it's not a bad paper, not half a bad paper. It would be quite bright if they didn't have all this stuff about labor in it.

The servants were abed and the doctor answered the bell himself. A colored man stood on the steps holding a large package.

Is Miss Matilda, the cook, at home, sah? asked the man.

Yes, but she has retired, returned the doctor.

Can I leave dis fo' her, sah?

Certainly, said the doctor.

He took the bundle from which flowers and buds were protruding, and after bidding the man good night, carefully carried it to the kitchen, where he deposited it, paper and all, in a pan of water.

The doctor thought nothing more of the affair until he heard Matilda's angry voice raised in conversation with the maid.

If I had de pusson heah, cried the cook, dat put mah new spring hat in dis yer dishpan, I'd scald 'im for sho.

He Explains

I hear you passed my wife on the street the other day and said she was not much for looks.

I can explain, old man. You see my wife was along and she asked me if I didn't think your wife a perfect beauty. As a married man yourself you know that was my cue to disagree.

The explanation was accepted.

Scribbler—Whatever the critics may say about my novel, they can't say I have stolen any other man's ideas. Tootsie—I should try that next time Bertie, if I were you.

Funny Mixups

Two of the boys were discussing blunders made by nervous or absent-minded people. Tom told one about the rattled bridegroom who asked the clergyman if it were still customary to kiss the bride, when Robert recalled the story of the woman who said to the usher in the church: May I occupy this pie? which so rattled the usher, who replied: No, but I'll sow you to another sheet.

Tom met this story with one about the Fourth of July orator who referred to George Washington washing the Delaware. Then Robert came back with the story of the young actor who was expected in a particular play to rush on the stage in great excitement and say: The queen has swooned!

He showed the necessary excitement and called out: The swoon has quipped! and then corrected himself and said: The swoon has quipped, and when the audience began to laugh he tried again with: The quoon has swooned, when he was dragged off by the stage manager. As he disappeared he was heard to say something for which in Queen Elizabeth's day he would have been beheaded.

Minard's Liniment Cures Colds, Etc.

An old Scotch lady was compelled to carry an ear trumpet with her wherever she went. Upon visiting a small church in Scotland not long ago she was watched very suspiciously by the sexton until she reached her seat. Then, as if he could stand the suspicion no longer, he went over to her and shaking a warning finger emphatically, he said: Madam—one toot, and you're oot.

The Request

Did Baron Fucash ask you for my hand, father? asked Gwendolin.

No, replied Mr. Cumrox, he called to discuss a marriage settlement. He didn't ask for your hand, he asked for my pocketbook.

Irrigating the Desert

The common opinion that there is no water in the desert of Sahara is quite incorrect, for in all parts of the great desert that are inhabited there is plenty of water. The trouble is to find it, for it lies at unknown depths below the surface of the sandy waters.

It is the mission of a party of artesian well diggers operating in the south of Algeria, to discover and make use of this hidden water, and in February last one of these engineers opened a well that has claimed the world's record, having a flow of 8,000 gallons a minute.

This is in the oasis of Tolga, about 22 miles west of Biskara. The water rises in a fountain six feet high and forms a small river that will make it possible to irrigate about 8,000 acres of land.

During the past ten years wells have been bored which produce 45,000 gallons of water a minute, making 116,000 gallons since the French have occupied the land. This makes it possible to irrigate 1,800,000 date palms in which lies the wealth of Southern Algeria.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS MAKING A REPUTATION IN THE WEST

Saskatchewan Man Tells How They Cured Him After Four Months' Suffering from Backache and Other Forms of Kidney Disease.

St. Phillips, Sask.—(Special)—In a new country where changes of climate and impure water are among the difficulties to be surmounted, kidney trouble is prevalent. It is the kidneys, the organs that strain the impurities out of the blood, that first feel any undue strain on the body. Consequently, Dodd's Kidney Pills have been well tried and tested in this neighborhood.

They have stood the test. Many settlers tell of backache, rheumatism and urinary troubles cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills. Mr. Otto Olchewski is one of these. In speaking of his cure he says:

"I suffered from kidney disease for four months. My back ached, I had heart flutterings, and was always tired and nervous. My skin had a harsh, dry feeling; my limbs were heavy; and I had a dragging sensation across the loins."

"I consulted a doctor, but, as I did not appear to improve, I decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I used six boxes, and now I am all right."

Dodd's Kidney Pills always stand the test. Ask your neighbors.

No Use at School

Now that little George had attained the age of six, the great problem of his education became the burning question of the hour. The family declared that little George must go to school immediately. Little George himself firmly maintained that he would do nothing of the sort, and henceforth the mere mention of the word school had very much the same effect upon him as a red rag is alleged to have upon a bull. Granny, however, who knew nothing of the difference of opinion in the family, ventured to remark one day: Your father tells me, George, that you are going to school next week. Then father's talking rot! the boy replied. Why, granny, I can't read and I can't write so what good should I do at school, I would like to know?

He Got the Earth

Some months ago excavations were being made for new tracks on the line of a certain famous railway. At one point a nearby resident obtained permission to remove a quantity of turf to resod his premises, the section boss being instructed to notify the excavating gang when the resident should have secured all he desired. The Hibernian's report is as follows: The man that wanted the earth has got it.

Dugald was ill, and his friend Donald took a bottle of whiskey to him. Donald gave the invalid one glass and said:

Ye'll get another yin in the morning. About five minutes elapsed, and then Dugald suddenly exclaimed:

Ye'd better let me hae the ither noo, Donald, ye hear o' sae many sudden deaths nooadays.

On a recent examination paper in civics was the question: If the president, vice-president, and all the members of the cabinet should die, who would officiate?

Robert, a boy of twelve, thought for some time, trying in vain to recall who came next in succession. At last a happy inspiration came to him and he answered: The undertaker.

Building Good Roads in Michigan

Here is the way that the State of Michigan got good roads: In one day 8,000 men, with 4,000 teams and 750 automobiles, having volunteered for the purpose, built 250 miles of good roads passing through forty-four townships. This means is open to any community which can develop the right kind of public spirit.

Quicksand Frozen In

In excavating recently for the foundation of a large building in Berlin, the workmen found it necessary to go 10 feet below the foundations of the adjoining buildings. They rested on quicksand, which would have flowed from under them had the builders not used an ingenious method to keep the sand from slipping away. It consisted in solidly freezing the sides of the new excavation. Five-inch freeze pipes, closed at the bottom, were sunk three feet apart all around the edges of the pit. The pipes contained one-inch pipes that were open at the bottom and connected with a supply header at the top. The five-inch pipe was connected with a drain header. Brine, which was pumped from a refrigerating plant, passed down the one-inch pipes, up the five-inch pipes, back into the drain header and thence to the brine tank.

Anaemic Condition or Bloodlessness

A peculiar pallor or even ghastliness of the skin is the marked symptom of anaemia. The eyelids, gums and lips appear to be almost bloodless. The cause of this condition is the absence of red corpuscles from the blood.

The anaemic patient is usually thin and weak, but may be fleshy and inclined to dropy. Stomach troubles and weakness of the bodily organs are accompaniments.

Red corpuscles must be added to the blood, and this can best be accomplished by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This great food cure is so gentle and natural in action that it is admirably suited for the use of women and girls suffering from anaemic or other diseases which arise from an impoverished condition of the blood.

It is readily assimilated, enters the blood streams and carries health and strength to every organ of the body.

The vigor of the digestive system is quickly restored, and the food taken into the body is properly digested and nourishment supplied to the whole system.

To get well and keep well you must supply the body with an abundance of pure, rich blood. Nothing can help you so well as

Wet Sports Day

Wet weather put a damper on the Sports which were held on Friday last in Didsbury. The morning did not promise much in the way of good weather but it was not until the middle of the afternoon that the rain started in earnest and there was a very cool wind blowing which kept a great many people away. In spite of the bad weather however there were between three and four hundred people present.

The horse races were the only events pulled off as the weather had become so bad nobody wished to stay or take part in the events after the races were over. The Lacombe baseball club and the Innisfail football club were both on the grounds ready to play but the games could not be pulled off because of wet grounds, and both teams returned to their respective towns disappointed and the committee in charge of the sports minus their expenses.

The winners of the horse races were as follows:

Free-for-all—1st Sinclair Bros.; 2nd McBain, Crossfield; 3rd Herdey.

3 minute Trot or Pace—1st McPhee, Crossfield; 2nd J. Baptist, Sunny slope; 3rd Mr. Ryckman.

Road Race—1st J. Cornish, Innisfail; 2nd Arthur Shantz; 3rd J. V. Berscht.

Boys' Pony Race—1st Bellamy; 2nd Patterson; 3rd Ray.

The Cowboys race was called off because the track was too wet.

Of course there was no fast time made in any of the races, and the only event which caused surprise was the failure of Sapphire, the well known race horse of this district, to keep up his former records by beating all his competitors. Sinclair Bros. horse "Larkhart" was the king pin of the Free-for-all, showing fine speed and form and winning easily.

In the evening the Didsbury Orchestra gave a dance. As the Opera house floor was not in good shape Mr. Usher, Manager of the Bijou Moving Picture theatre, very kindly gave the free use of his house to the boys and a very enjoyable evening was spent, a large crowd being present.

The proceeds which will be donated to the Didsbury Citizens Band, and will be used to help to pay for the new

No Re-Distribution at Next Session Likely

Ottawa, August 9.—There is good reason for believing at the present time that a measure of re-distribution will not be introduced in parliament this year says the Evening Journal, Friday. The chief reason for this is that the whole basis and system of the parliamentary representation may be changed as a result of the conference of the provincial premiers which will be held in Ottawa some time in September.

The Journal also states that it has been practically decided that parliament will meet in November, and not in January as has been urged on the government, more particularly by western and maritime province members.

The closure rules are not likely to go a very long way towards shortening the session, says the Journal. "Closure is designed merely to obstruct obstructions, and not intended to stop full and fair discussion of any important measure by the representatives of the people and it is quite possible that it may not be adopted in a single instance this coming session. All of this points to the fact that in order to get through in a reasonable time, parliament will meet earlier than usual this year.

The Critic

My father says the paper that he reads ain't put up right; He finds a lot of fault, he does, perusin' it at night;

He says there ain't a single thing in it worth while to read

And that it doesn't print the kind of stuff the people need.

He tosses it aside and says it's strictly "on the bum"

But you ought to hear him holler when the paper doesn't come.

He reads about the weddings and he snorts like all git out.

He reads the social doin's with a most derisive shout;

He says they make the papers for the wimmen folks alone;

He'll read about the parties and he'll fume and fret and groan;

He says of information it don't contain a crum!

But you ought to hear him holler when the paper doesn't come.

He's always first to grab it, and he reads it plumb right through, He doesn't miss an item or a want ad.—that is true

He says: "They don't know what we want, those darn newspaper guys I'm goin' to take a day some time and go and put 'em wise."

Sometimes it seems as though they must be deaf and blind and dumb But you ought to hear him holler when the paper doesn't come.

The Easy Laxative

In justice to yourself you should try Rexall Orderlies, — your money back if you don't like them. They are a candy confection that really do give easy relief from constipation.

Good health is largely dependent upon the bowels. When they become sluggish the waste material that is thrown off by the system accumulates. This condition generates poisons which circulate throughout the body, tending to create coated tongue, bad breath, headache, dull brain action, nervousness, biliousness and other annoyances.

Avoid harsh cathartics and physics. They give but temporary relief. They often aggravate the real trouble. They are particularly bad for children, delicate or aged persons.

Rexall Orderlies

Come in tablet form, taste just like candy and are noted for their easy, soothing action upon the bowels. They don't purge, gripe, cause nausea, looseness, nor the inconveniences attendant upon the use of purgatives. Their action is so pleasant that the taking of Rexall Orderlies almost becomes a desire instead of a duty.

Children like Rexall Orderlies. They are ideal for aged or delicate persons as well as for the most robust.

They act toward relieving constipation, and also to overcome its cause and to make unnecessary the frequent use of laxatives. They serve to tone and strengthen the nerves and muscles of the bowels and associated organs or glands.

Make Us Prove It

We guarantee to refund every penny paid us for Rexall Orderlies if they do not give entire satisfaction. We ask no promises and we in no way obligate you. Your mere word is sufficient for us to promptly and cheerfully refund the money.

Doesn't that prove that Rexall Orderlies must be right? You must know we would not dare make such a promise unless we were positively certain that Rexall Orderlies will do all we claim for them. There is no money risk attached to a trial of Rexall Orderlies, and in justice to yourself, you should not hesitate to test them.

Rexall Orderlies come in convenient vest-pocket size tin boxes. 12 tablets, 10c; 36 tablets, 25c; 80 tablets, 50c.

CAUTION: Please bear in mind that Rexall Orderlies are not sold by all drug stores. You can buy Rexall Orderlies only at the Rexall Stores. You can buy Rexall Orderlies in this community only at our store:
